“The Rock-Pond Developer Studio gives us a robust enterprise reporting platform that simplifies the work of our developers, gives our users one place to go for all of their information, reduces risks associated with in-house development and makes corporate compliance much happier”

Often it makes sense to utilize internal developers to get information specific to your business. Developing reports in-house has its benefits, drawbacks and risks. The Rock-Pond Developer Studio provides powerful features to extend the benefits while eliminating the drawbacks and mitigating the risks. Your developers will have the development, management and deployment tool Rock-Pond Solutions uses. It will enable them to develop Crystal Reports against any database and deploy them into the Rock-Pond Information Center.

Your Developers Will Love It.

Developers will appreciate the built in report documentation, automatic report encryption and security features that are built into their reports when they deploy them to the Rock-Pond Information Center. When they need help understanding the CPR+ data structures, we are just an email or a phone call away. Faced with new CPR+ releases that add data or change data structures? No problem, Rock-Pond Solutions is there for you.

Your Management Team Will Depend On It.

What if your developers make mistakes or need help? What if they leave? What if they don't back up their report source code? What if they can't keep up? No problem. The Rock-Pond Developer Studio maintains every version of your report source for you and we can come to your rescue whenever you need us. You and your staff have one report platform to learn, one place to go for all of your information.

Corporate Compliance Will Approve It.

In-house development can create “data security holes” in your information system that lead to HIPAA and internal audit risks. Users can often access data from sites CPR+ does not allow them access to. You may have no idea who is running custom reports. Tracking or documentation of report changes that impact your business is often incomplete. Users might be able to run unauthorized reports against your CPR+ data. The Rock-Pond Developer Studio and the Rock-Pond Information Center eliminate these risks and will make Corporate Compliance happy.
